One wife released

Singer hearings begin

A U.S. magistrate judge called Vickie Singer "a psychopath" in a series of detention hearings Monday that resulted in the release of only one of the six adult members in the Singer-Swapp family arrested on federal charges.

Charlotte Singer Swapp, 19, wife of Addam Swapp and daughter of Vickie Singer, was released into a community treatment center where she will undergo additional psychological evaluation. Judge Ron Boyce said she may have visitation from her in-laws and her one-year-old child.

U.S. Attorney Brent Ward read an entry from the diary of Charlotte's mother who wrote of a confrontation between Charlotte and law men on Nov. 5, 1987.

"Charlotte said, 'We don't care for your laws. Your people uphold murder and abortion.' Charlotte was like a pack of dynamite exploding," the entry read.

Mrs. Singer, who appeared before the judge after Jonathon Swapp, was described as "a person of unpredictable personality" in a psychological evaluation done for the court.

"The old report describes her as a passive-aggressive personality. In laymen's terms, she (is being described as) a psychopath," Boyce said.

Mrs. Singer was the only one to make a statement to the court saying, "It would be to the best interest of me and my children (if I were released). I give my honor that I will not try to escape the trial or the court proceedings. I will put my property as my word."

Despite her pleadings, Boyce denied her request considering her a "flight risk" and a danger to those around her.

Her numerous diary entries indicated she had a working knowledge of circumstances surrounding the bombing of the stake center of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and the ensuing aftermath.

On Jan. 15, Mrs. Singer wrote, "He (Addam) is going down to set dynamite charges in the stake center. They will know who did it."

Mrs. Singer also said she hoped "the check would come," so that she would be able to buy groceries. She spent $230 on food the day before the bombing.

After the bombing she wrote, "It's very serious. The battle has begun."

Richard Lambert, assistant U.S. attorney, said of Mrs. Singer, "If it hadn't been for the actions of this woman, an officer would not have been buried in the soil of Utah a few hours ago."

He continued, "Is it conceivable that a mother sends her 15-year-old son with a load of dynamite down to blow up a church?"

Addam Swapp was accompanied by his brother Jonathon and Vickie's son Benjamin to place the explosives in the church building. Her diary entries indicated she was worried about sending her son and she had to call on the Lord for guidance. She felt confident enough to let him go and then Addam and Jonathon Swapp and Timothy Singer set Benjamin apart as a member of their priesthood.

Also detained in the Salt Lake County jail are Jonathon Swapp, Heidi Singer Swapp, and Timothy Singer, who is "seriously" being considered for other state charges of murder, Lambert said during the court proceedings.

Ward said one of his witnesses would testify that as he advanced to the house he observed shots coming from a window of the northwest corner of the home.

Murder suspect missing

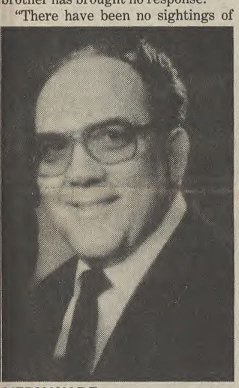
A nationwide bulletin attempting to locate a Malad, Idaho,man wanted for questioning in the shooting death of a BYU associate professor and his brother has brought no response.

"There have been no sightings of Victor Wade since the bulletin was issued Sunday morning," said Oneida County Sheriff's Deputy Suzy Wakley.



VERN WADE

BYU associate professor Vern Wade, 63, Provo, and his brother Erven, 52, Sandy, were found Saturday morning by their brother Marvin.

Wakely said the two were shot to death at approximately 9:05 a.m. after arriving at the family home to meet a potential buyer for their property.

Victor was waiting at the family farm when his brothers arrived.

Victor was seen leaving the home before the bodies were discovered, according to Barbara Wade, wife of Vern.

"We are grateful more weren't hurt. Usually I go up with (Vern) and there are four or five people along (to see the property)," Barbara Wade said.

There has been dissension in the family since their father's death five years ago when the estate was left in a family trust, with Vern as its executor, according to Barbara Wade.

"Victor was the first born and eldest son and he was demanding all (of the estate). Nine of the 10 children in the family have stayed together lovingly to run the trust," she said.

Vern, father of three, had been an associate professor in the Elementary Education Department at BYU since 1971.

Before coming to BYU, he was a reading consultant for the Weld County Board of Cooperative Education Services in LaSalle, Colo.

After receiving his bachelor's degree from BYU, Vern Wade went to the University of Northern Colorado for his master's and doctorate degrees.

He was a diagnostic reading instructor, director of the undergraduate internship program in the department and coordinator of the doctoral comprehensive exams.

"(Vern) earned high respect from the faculty, and his students said they felt they were getting worthwhile experience under his tutelage," Department Chairman James Dunn said.

Services will be held Thursday at 11 a.m. at the Hillside Chapel, 1900 N. 1500 East, Provo.

Viewings will be held Wednesday evening from 7 to 9, and Thursday before the services from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the chapel.

BYU ranked No. 2 UPI, No. 3 AP

Never before has a BYU basketball team been ranked higher in the basketball polls as it is now by the Associated Press and the coach's poll.

BYU is ranked No. 2 in the UPI poll, and No. 3 in the AP poll.

BYU will be taking its 15-0 record into the Marriott Center tonight against Tulsa University's 5-12 record at 7 p.m. The game will be televised live by both KUTV (chan. 2) and USA Cable Television.

"I don't know how the rankings will affect this team," said Carl Ingersoll, BYU assistant coach. "They have to accept the challenge now to prove that they're as good as they (the polls) say they are. It's the kind of pressure you dream about – good pressure."

Several of the players were surprised to learn of the teams' ranking. Only the University of Arizona is ahead of BYU in the UPI poll, and the University of Nevada Las Vegas is ranked second in the AP poll.

"I didn't think we would be ranked this high to tell you the truth," said center Jim Usevitch, who has 21 blocked shots on the year. "If we keep playing our game we'll stay there."

Forward Jeff Chatman agreed with Usevitch but said he thought the teams ranked ahead of BYU in last week's poll would have to lose before BYU could move up. Chatman said Purdue would be the toughest top 10 team to play.

The closest a BYU team has come to being No. 1 was in 1965 when they were ranked No. 3 in the UPI poll. They were 6-0 when they were beat by Lasalle.

What about the possibilities of this year's team being ranked No. 1?

Chatman said, "Arizona would have to lose and then we would move up. It's always a dream to be ranked No. 1."

While the polls haven't appeared to be a factor with BYU's team being overconfident, Tulsa Coach J.D. Barnett is skeptical about his teams' chances against BYU tonight.

"Obviously it takes great defense to beat BYU," said Barnett. "If it (beating BYU) were simple somebody would have already done it."

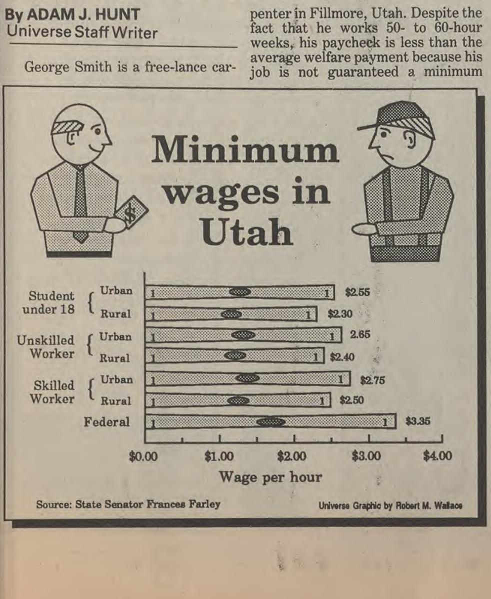
Senate bill would raise state wages to the federal level

By ADAM J. HUNT
Universe Staff Writer

George Smith is a free-lance carpenter in Fillmore, Utah. Despite the fact that he works 50- to 60-hour weeks, his paycheck is less than the average welfare payment because his job is not guaranteed a minimum hourly wage by the federal government. He makes $2.65 an hour.



Source: State Senator Frances Farley

Universe Graphic by Robert M. Wallace

Smith is representative of nearly 6 percent of Utah's population. Utah currently has six different minimum wages for people who do not fall under the guidelines established by the federal government. Wages are based on a person's skills and the area where he lives.

Seven years after the federal government raised the federal minimum wage to $3.35, legislation has finally been introduced to end the confusion and discrimination that Utah's wages have created and to bring the state's minimum wage to the federal level.

Sen. Frances Farley, D-Salt Lake City, introduced the bill after she found out about the diversity of wages while doing research on the Utah Labor Code. She said she did not even know that Utah had a lower minimum wage than the federal standard, let alone six different ones.

"They're extremely complicated to follow," said Farley. "There are minimum wages for students, skilled workers and unskilled workers in rural and urban areas. The statutes needed to be cleaned up."

Farley said the wages were set to protect women and children from being discriminated against. However, the wages have now become a way to discriminate against men from making a livable wage. The laws are now useless because they violate federal laws which prohibit discrimination based on sex, she said.

"The state minimum wage only covers women and children, not men," Farley said. "The present laws are unenforceable and antiquated because they discriminate against men."

Farley and several other legislators are working to clean up the labor code. Her bill is one of three she has introduced to stop the code from violating federal laws.

"We wanted to simplify the minimum wage so there was only one and to bring the labor code up to federal standards," she said.

Farley said she did not believe the bill, which overwhelmingly passed in the Senate, would have any effect on poverty in Utah. "At $3.35, people are still better off (financially) on welfare with food stamps," she said.

However, if the federal government raises the minimum wage as it is expected to within the next year, Smith still will not be making more than $3.35. Farley said that though she wanted to add an automatic hike into the bill, one of the concessions she made to bring Utah's wage laws into line with 1980s prices was to leave out a way for them to stay in line in the 1990s.

Ann House, widow of slain police officer, Lt. "Freddie" Floyd House, was joined by 2,000 mourners at Monday's funeral services which were held in Orem. She is surrounded by her children, from left to right, Seth, 8; Christine, 2; and Janneke, 5.

Slain police officer honored; over 2,000 attend services

By DAWN LARSEN
Senior Reporter

Lt. Freddie Floyd House "deeply shared" the governmental goal of a peaceful conclusion to the 13-day standoff between authorities and a polygamous family in Marion, said the slain officer's brother at funeral services Monday.

In fact, House "approached the situation with his gun firmly holstered showing restraint," said Tom House.

More than 2,000 people attended funeral services for House, including Elder Vaughn J. Featherstone, from the First Quorum of the Seventy of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Featherstone read a letter to House's widow from the First Presidency conveying their love and sympathy.

Fred House, who had attended BYU, was a certified peace officer, experienced dog handler and member of the special weapons and tactics (SWAT) team at the Utah State Prison. He was killed last Thursday when a plan to subdue Addam Swapp, the leader of the Singer family, went awry.

House reportedly was shot by a member of the Singer clan when he stepped into an open doorway to give a trained dog hand signals.

Although officers had a gun trained on the person who reportedly shot House, they were under orders not to fire at the Singer house for fear of hitting one of the nine children inside.

House's superior, Gary Deland, told the overflow congregation that House was a "wild card" and loved "work on the edge."

Deland said House had the highest arrest record for escaped convicts and in 1987 won the medal of merit award from the department for outstanding service. With all the talent that was brought in from across the United States, it was a tribute to House that he was one of the first people asked for in the Singer standoff, said Deland.

House's best friend, Kent Chapman, who also spoke at the funeral, said "when all the odds were overwhelming, when the enemy was too great, we could turn to Fred."

Colleague Will Fowlke told the congregation about House's "velvet" side. Although he was fearless, masculine and strong, he was also tender and kind, Fowlke said. This side of House was best exemplified when he was called to assist his wife in the nursery at church. Fowlke said he loved to get down on his hands and knees and teach the children "The Itsy Bitsy Spider" song.

House was born in Los Angeles Feb. 1, 1952. He graduated from Pasadena High School and attended Brigham Young University. When he was 21 he went to work for the Utah State Prison. House married Ann Christine Whiting Dec. 18, 1976 in Highland, Utah. He was the father of three children: Seth, 8; Janneke, 5; and Christine, 2.

House is also survived by his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Winder, Azusa, Calif.; sisters, Mrs. Larry (Lynette) Anderson, Riverside, Calif.; Mrs. Michael (Dawn) Tracy, Highland; Mrs. Ed (Jenni) Martens, Dana Point, Calif.; and brothers Tom, Bluffdale, and Gary, Orem.

A trust fund has been established for House's family. Contributions can be sent to Valley Bank & Trust Co., 3430 S. Redwood Road, Salt Lake City, Utah 84119. Checks should be made out to the "Family of Lt. Fred House."

Meese denies part of memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Monday that he did not recall reading the portion of a memo on a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project that refered to a payoff plan involving the Israeli Labor Party of former Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

The memo to Meese, from his longtime friend, attorney E. Robert Wallach, is the focus of a criminal investigation of Meese's activities by independent counsel James McKay that began nearly nine months ago.

After receiving Wallach's memo in 1985, Meese took no action in regard to the potential illegal activity mentioned in the document, sources familiar with McKay's investigation have said.

Meese said that since Friday, when the memo's existence was first disclosed in the Los Angeles Times, "there has been a cascade of misinformation, false headlines, half-truths, innuendo, and misunderstanding of the law."

Meese responded with a five-page statement which he read to reporters. He refused to answer any questions and walked out of the room as a reporter asked him whether he would remain as attorney general.

President Reagan, returning from a speech he delivered to an audience of religious broadcasters, was asked about Meese's situation. "No comment. I'm not going to talk about it," Reagan said.

"The language in Mr. Wallach's memorandum that has given rise to this speculation consists of 10 words in one of two long documents he provided to me," Meese said in his statement.

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres angrily denied Monday that Wallach ever offered him a bribe.

"They didn't say they offered me," Peres said when asked about the memo on Israel army radio. "What was said was ... it might be worth making an offer. No one said an offer was made or carried out. There's no basis to the reports that anything was done."

Meanwhile, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called for Meese's resignation.

"For the attorney general, the chief law enforcement officer of our country, to be spending his time going to grand jury investigations, being a witness in connection with trials that are occurring, being the subject of personal inquiry time and time again, I believe that provides a source of embarrassment to the president and, as a consequence, a source of embarrassment to all Americans," said Metzenbaum during an interview on The McNeil-Lehrer News Hour televised by the Public Broadcasting System.

Meese said in his statement that the "language in Mr. Wallach's memorandum that has given rise to this speculation consists of 10 words in one of two long documents he provided to me," Meese said in his statement.

"I do not recall having read the specific words that have now mushroomed into importance, but I certainly did not receive from the memorandum any impression of illegality whatsoever," the attorney general said.

He added that the memorandum, which is classified and which he refused to outline in detail, "contains no reference to bribes or payoffs."

Mecham acts finicky for House panel

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham denied wrongdoing Monday before a House panel considering his possible impeachment and won a standoff after he refused to answer questions from House attorneys.

The meeting of the House SelectCommittee abruptly adjourned when the Republican governor insisted he would only answer questions from House members, not their attorneys. Hours later, House members, meeting in separate party caucuses, agreed to let Mecham testify under those terms on Wednesday.

Mecham spokesman Ken Smith said that on Wednesday the governor will answer questions from any House member.

At the hearing held a week earlier, the governor had promised "no conditions" on his testimony.

"Governor, it's obvious that you feel ... you should not comply with the rules that every other witness has complied with," House Select Committee Chairman Jim Skelly said at the hearing.

"I am in this case the accused, not just another witness," Mecham said.

Mecham, who has been in office just barely over a year, was ordered Monday to face a recall election on May 17. He also faces a March 9 trial on criminal charges accusing him of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Skelly said he wanted to subpoena Mecham, but was outvoted by Mecham's fellow Republicans who form a majority in the House.

Jury seated as Ku Klux Klan trial begins

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A jury of 13 whites and one black was seated Monday for the murder trial of two former Ku Klux Klan leaders accused in the death of a black teen-ager in a case that eventually drove a Klan organization into bankruptcy.

Attorneys were scheduled to present opening arguments Tuesday in the trial of Bennie Jack Hays, 72, and his son-in-law, Frank Cox, 32. The men were indicted in August in the March 1981 death of Michael Donald, 19, who was beaten and his body hanged from a tree. His death resulted in a $7 million civil verdict that led to bankruptcy for the United Klans of America.

Mobile County Circuit Judge Michael Zoghby gave attorneys permission to question potential jurors individually after nearly all the panelists raised their hand when asked if they had heard of the case.

The jury was seated at 7 p.m. after some eight hours of screening. The panel has four men and 10 women, including the two alternates. The alternates were not identified.

Defendants dismissed in Logan lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has dropped Box Elder County and Sheriff Bob Limb as defendants in a Logan woman's $600,000 civil rights suit over alleged sexual molestation by a former deputy.

U.S. District Judge David Sam has ruled that the suit, filed by Giselle Y. Drake, will be directed only against the former deputy, Michael Busby.

Busby was fired following an internal investigation last February, a hearing by the county's merit commission in May and an appeals hearing in 1st District Court in September.

In his recent decision, Sam dismissed the portions of the suit naming the county and Limb on the grounds none of the factual allegations were directed against them.

Sam also ruled that the county and the sheriff should not be included in the suit because there is no official county policy promoting conduct such as that alleged by Drake.

The suit contends Drake's civil rights were violated Jan. 24, 1987, when Busby arrested her on suspicion of driving under the influence of alcohol. Busby later took the woman to the county jail after she was found to have a blood-alcohol level exceeding the legal limit, the suit states.

Breast cancer deaths, detection increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The breast cancer detection rate among American women is the highest on record but death rates have increased slightly instead of improving from early treatment as experts had hoped, according to a federal study released Monday.

The study, compiled by the National Cancer Institute to reflect rates of incidence and death from all types of cancer, said breast cancer is still the leading cause of death from malignancy among women.

It says this finding suggests women are not taking advantage of screening techniques that could detect breast cancer at a stage when cure is more likely, although detection of breast cancer is at the highest rate in history.

The study also said that although lung cancer remains the leading cause of cancer deaths, the death rate decreased among males in 1985 but continues to increase in women.

NCI used various studies to compile a report generally reflecting cancer statistics for 1950 to 1985, with some cancer estimates for 1987.

Salt Lake pumping resumes this week

LAKESIDE, Utah (AP) — Massive pumps designed to siphon excess water from the Great Salt Lake and into the western desert will be turned on again by week's end, state officials said.

The 80-mile-long, 30-mile-wide lake rose slightly more than an inch in January, and Utah Natural Resources Director Dee Hansen said the pumps will resume their work "within a few days."

The pumping will have less effect than when it is done during warmer weather, he said.

"The real benefit to pumping is evaporation, and we're not getting much of that in the winter," Hansen explained.

Cold weather can also hinder pumping. As water cools below certain temperatures, minute salt crystals grow on the giant turbine blades, causing strain and throwing the pumps off balance, he said.

"The salt was cleaned off about three or four weeks ago," Hansen said.

As soon as air and water warms up again, the pumps will do a better job of keeping low the level of the lake.

Morton Thiokol files lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Morton Thiokol Inc. has named a California company in a federal lawsuit alleging the breach of contracts to design and install $3.77 million worth of equipment to produce auto safety air bags.

In its U.S. District Court suit, the company seeks unspecified damages from KDT Systems Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of KDT Industries Inc. of Texas.

Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab confirmed Monday that the company has a contract with Chrysler Corp. to produce the inflatable safety bags, but he declined to further discuss the suit.

The suit says that KDT systems was to have developed and installed a $1.39 million automated assembly line for the air bag system's driver module by July 7, 1987.

Further, a $2.37 million automated assembly line for the system's inflator assembly was to have been completed by Aug. 3, 1987, the company contends.

Morton Thiokol attorneys argue that KDT Systems failed to design and install systems that met contractual specifications, and estimate it will take an additional $1 million to bring the assembly lines into compliance with the contracts.

In addition to alleging that KDT Systems breached both contracts, Morton Thiokol is asking that KDT Industries be included as a defendant in the proceedings.

Attorneys charge the parent company in Texas is using KDT Systems to "unfairly insulate the defendant ... from the damages that will be incurred."

Bill could hurt low-income families

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Senate committee has endorsed a bill to repeal reforms that have reduced the income tax liability for some 80,000 low-income people.

The bill, which would shift about $60 million in tax liability away from middle- and upper-income groups, cleared the Senate Business, Labor and Economic Development Committee Monday on a 4-2 vote.

"This is a rich man's bill if I ever saw one," said Sen. Omar Bunnell, D-Price.

"If we pass this we go back to a highly regressive income tax. Right now we have the burden pretty much where it should be."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Kay Cornaby, R-Salt Lake, would repeal several changes in income tax law approved by the Legislature last year.

Lawmakers reduced the tax liability for low-income families by raising allowable deductions for dependents. To compensate for revenues lost through the higher deductions, the Legislature eliminated the state deduction for income taxes paid to the federal government.

Fifteen senators, the number needed to pass the measure, are co-sponsoring Cornaby's bill. However, Sen. Lorin Pace, R-Salt Lake, said he would not vote for the bill on the floor unless it became a part of a comprehensive review of the state's income tax structure.

Pace noted that the income tax reform was passed last year as compensation for a sales tax increase, which hit low-income families harder than those who earn more.

"I think it would be just a plain, unfair reversal of our position" to repeal the income tax changes, Pace said.

Pace moved that the committee hold the bill, however, his motion was rejected by the panel.

If the reforms are repealed, 176,000 people who now report gross income of $15,000 per year or less would see their taxes go up $109 according to State Tax Commission estimates cited by Bunnell. By contrast, 5,452 people reporting gross income of $100,000 or more would enjoy an average reduction of $3,104, Bunnell said.

Cornaby said his bill would restore fairness by lowering the deduction for dependents from $1,500 per year to $750.

Because income tax revenues are dedicated to pay for public education programs, this would ensure that those with large families pay a greater share of the cost of educating their children.

Cornaby said it has been expressed that those receiving benefits should also pay for those benefits.

Proposed utility take-over receives powerful criticism

RICHFIELD (AP) — The merger of Utah Power & Light Co. and PacifiCorp would create a super-utility able to flex its control over nearly 30,000 miles of high-voltage lines as well as a substantial portion of the western states' electrical market, an opponent says.

Garkane Power Association General Manager Glen Willardson said that along with satellite dishes, the merger — still subject to regulators' approval — will be the topic of a series of southern Utah Garkane district director meetings that will begin on Tuesday.

Willardson charged that UP&L has tried to discredit locally-owned power systems by wording a recent letter sent out to consumers to leave people with false perceptions that UP&L and PacifiCorp are "good guys who only want to save their consumers money."

PacifiCorp has a number of rural electric co-ops adjacent to its present service area that are designated as take-over targets, Willardson said.

He indicated that unless UP&L agrees to leave small utility operations such as his alone, Garkane has no choice but to oppose the merger.

Utah property sales suffer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's real estate market climbed to a peak early in 1987 before dropping off. Consequently, the market ended the year at almost 8 percent less in sales than in 1986, the Salt Lake Board of Realtors said.

Realtors President, Dan Lawler, said 6,180 single-family homes, condominiums, duplexes, apartments and building lots were sold during 1987.

That figure is low when compared to 6,799 total sales in 1986.

"Last year was not the best year for real estate in the Salt Lake area," he said.

The only category to show any gain was condominium sales— from 481 to 491 — according to the board's Multiple Listing Service.

Twins show off their genes

y STACEY NIELSEN
niverse Staff Writer

Thirty-three of BYU's 72 sets of identical and aternal twins and one set of triplets are involved a twin study at BYU.

The twins, who are all BYU students, are participating to complete a doctrinal study for Gregg Afan, a graduate student from Central Michigan niversity who has taught at Hope College for even years. When completed, Afman would like to ave the study published in medical and exercise-cience journals.

The study consists of the testing of physical capailities in twins. "We are looking at the role of enetics in adaption to exercise and we are focusing ostly on cardiovascular," Afman said.

At the end of a 22-week testing period, which is nning from October to April, a comparison will be rawn between each set of twins and their accomlishments.

This will determine two things. First, genetics' ole in exercise with response to the heart. And second, genetics verses environment in a person's basic exercise capabilities.

For example, if identical twins increase to an equal level of achievement, and fraternal twins increase on different levels, depending on their own capacity, a specific hypothesis can be made. Since identical twins share 100 percent of the same genetic makeup and fraternal twins do not, then most of a person's fitness level can be genetically inherited instead of environmentally based.

In order to prove this hypothesis, a blood test, breathing tests, a maximum heart rate test on the stationary bicycle and treadmill, cardiovascular heart tests, underwater percent body fat tests and a lung capacity test were conducted.

Then, each set of twins was given a personal fitness program to follow. This includes running and bicycling twice a week. By monitoring the twins' progress, the information needed will be supplied.

With the twins coming from 17 states and more than 30 cities, there are quite a variety of backgrounds. However, they can all relate to each other and the twin experiences that they have in common.

Identical twins, Gerilyn Chappell, a senior majoring in interpersonal communications from Cheyenne, Wyo., and Terilyn Chappell, a senior majoring in financial planning are excited to participate in Afman's twin study.

"It is fun because we have a chance to meet and associate with other twins, which is unusual," Gerilyn said.

Fraternal twins, Stacy and Laurie Wood, freshmen from New Jersey, shared the same opinion about having the opportunity to be involved, but receiving physical education credit was an extra incentive.

Besides the physical opportunities and services that are available, the Chappell twins said that it is good to know that other sets of twins are asked questions like "Can you tell what your twin is thinking?" and "Can you feel the pain when your twin gets hurt?"

Stacy can remember being asked many times if she were poked would Laurie feel it also.

One last question that every twin is asked is "What is it like being a twin?"

Annette and Amy Pew, sophomores from Orem, and identical twins, responded that even though "we all hate to be asked the same questions, we like being twins and we like to be individuals."

Working together with other twins also gives them time to share childhood experiences. The Chappell twins can remember when they were younger and arguing they would call each other names, for example,"you're ugly" and then stop to remember that they looked the same.

Identical twins, Jill and Jodi Harris, a sophomore and freshman from Sandy, recall the only time they were mistaken for each other — in the sixth grade.

Unlike a normal day, this day they dressed alike. They both had the same English teacher and home economics teacher, but were not in the same class periods. Jodi went to English first and Jill went to home economics. Later, Jodi showed up for home economics and Jill went to English. The teachers mistook each twin for the one that had attended the class earlier. In fact, it took some convincing on their part to prove that they were not one person.

It has been shown that 40 percent of all twins develop a type of communication between themselves.

Marsha Chappell, mother of Terilyn and Gerilyn, said, "It was as if they had an inborn knowledge of each other. It was like a foreign language to us, but they understood themselves."

Gerilyn remembers one word, "serz," that only Terilyn understood. It meant "smiling with your teeth."

However, most twins quit using this inter-communication by time they are 5 or 6 years of age and actually do not remember much of it.

Unlike the Chappell's, Stacy and Laurie did not develop their own "language" when they were young.

In a recent Newsweek magazine article about twins, Laura Terheggen was quoted as saying, "You have a built-in best friend. If you can't relate to something half of yourself, you can't relate to anything."

Terilyn agrees, but then she doesn't know what it would be like not to have a twin.

She said she would like to have twins of her own, because she knows what it is like and what to do. But, then again, she'd have to think twice about that, because she knows it's twice the work.

By STACEY NIELSEN
Universe Staff Writer

From photographs of the Vietnam War to crayon zippers, a display of still photography is being shown in the ELWC Art Gallery through Feb. 13.

Rick Nye, a professor of fine arts, has been teaching "off and on" since 1975 and this is the first exhibition featuring his own works that does not include any students or other photographers.

Nye first became interested in photography when he was drafted into the Army during the Vietnam War.

He first picked up a camera while in Vietnam and the hobby stayed with him throughout the war.

The hobby became an integral part of his life. He later returned to BYU where he received his Masters of Arts in 1972.

"Photography is an expression of personal statements. It is my own conception of composition, rather than technique," Nye said.

Because of significant personal meaning, the photograph "Tour of Duty" is one of Nye's favorites. It reflects his memories of the war and the courage it took to be there.

Many of his other photos portray the significance of the war in his life.

"Last Time Together, Cu Chi, Vietnam, 16 May 1967" is very personal to him.

The shot was taken midway through duty. The six men in the photograph were all that were left of a group of 13 that came over together. Five months later one of the six died and the others, including Nye, were seriously injured.

This is the last time this group of close friends was able to be together, Nye said.

His photograph "The Spy" has provided the most success for Nye. Winning the Kodak Gallery Award for Photographic Excellence in 1987, it will be displayed in the Epcot Center this summer.

"Photography is my life right now," Nye said.

He added it is something that a person has to have fun with and it doesn't always need to be the traditional work.

Television in the '80s

'Couch Potatoes' sprouting up at 'Y'

y JENNIFER MYERS
nd The Associated Press

Flopping on the couch, munching nacks and flipping channels are vital kills for a growing number of Americans: couch potatoes.

The recent trend seems to be merging — in spite of the fitness raze, and commercials that promote immer bodies and diet foods — and as received national recognition at e first National Couch Potato Conention held in Lincolnwood, Ill.

At the convention, an estimated 00 people gathered to perfect the kills of couch potatoism: spending ours on the sofa watching television, roper dress code for a couch potato, he use of extension cords and remote ontrol to alleviate the stress of havng to move from that "just right" osition.

A "free-form sofa-flop" contest was held, in which participants jumped onto a couch, landing in TV-viewing positions. They were judged on grace and sloth, organizers said.

BYU students are following this national trend according to Rick Nelson, a senior from Orange County, Calif., majoring in political science, and Jim Fretwell, a Virginia Beach, Va., senior in international relations.

Nelson said that he heartily approves of the trend, being an admitted couch potato.

He said that the trend is "all Cosby's fault by starting good TV programming."

Nelson said he has noticed BYU students following the trend.

"Don't go dancing on a Thursday night," said Nelson. "You won't have anyone to dance with because they are all at home watching TV."

Fretwell said he believes VCR popularity is a primary cause of couch potato increase.

Fretwell said he is only a couch potato trainee because he lacks the most important element: a television. He said his couch potatoing must be done at friends' homes as a "group sport" and now believes "You should never do it alone."

Nelson and Fretwell agree that the development of couch potatoing as an art has been hampered by fitness hooplah, but it is possible to have the best of both worlds.

"You can do both," said Nelson of exercise and couch potatoing. "Watch a 60 minute workout tape on fast forward and you get a great vicarious workout in a mere 20 minutes."

The offical couch potato stance, according to Nelson and Fretwell is a reclining position with feet up "unless, of course, you are watching sports," said Fretwell.

According to Nelson, the most important criteria for being a couch potato is "developing your own indentation on the couch."

The increase of restaurant home delivery and board games are telltale signs of growing couch potatoism at BYU, according to Nelson and Fretwell.

Only time will tell if couch potatoism will be a hit.

While we wait, why not watch a little televison?

EAGLE IS:
INCENTIVES

Just ask Garr Judd. Last summer, his third year with Eagle, Garr won over $2,000 worth of sales incentives . . . a $800 scholarship, a trip to Hawaii, a trip to Lake Powell, a limousine dinner and more. All this in addition to the $20,000 income he earned.

Last year, Eagle Marketing awarded over $50,000 in sales incentives to its reps. Not a bad commitment to motivation. And just one reason why Garr will be back for more this summer. So will many more college students.

Eagle Marketing is an established publishing company based in Provo. They specialize in providing uplifting educational and religious products to adults and children. Currently, Eagle representatives work in 35 states and Canada.

As a result, it's also financially attractive for Eagle Marketing representatives. Very attractive. Our reps will make between $5,000 and $7,000 in just 16 weeks. But the benefits aren't just financial. You see, Eagle Marketing Corporation is the company that wrote the book on effective summer job training.

In fact, the know-how and career skills we'll teach you are often more valuable than your earnings. (In many instances, our training was the key to a very appealing job upon graduation.)

However, the most immediate and tangible reward is the money and the freedom it creates. What you earn can easily support you all next year. In fine style.

But we won't force the job on you. There are plenty of interested people without doing that.

If you'd like to be part of that group, come attend a brief – and casual – meeting this Wednesday at 6:30 or 8 p.m. at the address shown below. Or call Gary Laney, 225-9000.

Skiers take top honors

BYU Finnish skier Jouni Kijanen led the Cougars in the slalom, placing third, during the annual BYU Ski Team Invitational.

By DALE ROWLEY
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU Men's and Women's Alpine Ski Teams overcame adverse weather conditions and the toughest competion short of the national championships to win both the slalom and giant slalom events at Sundance ski resort.

The weekend meet, the biggest so far this year and the first national qualifier, featured more than 160 men and women competing in both slalom and giant slalom events.

Fifteen teams, including four of the nation's top teams in the National Collegiate Ski Association, attended the annual BYU Ski Team Invitational.

For the first time since 1983, the Cougar men and women are both ranked No. 1 in the NCSA, according to a national coaches poll released by Ski Racing Magazine last week.

"I was very pleased with the way the team performed this weekend," said BYU coach Ford Stevenson. "With all but about the top two teams in the NCSA competing, the Sundance race turned out to be a dress rehearsal for the national championships coming up in March."

On Friday, BYU freshman Janilee Jones led the women's team to victory, winning the giant slalom event and just edging second place teammate Raquel Weldon to win her first college event.

Other BYU finishers in the womens's giant slalom were fourth place Elizabeth Kurkowiak, Anette Harildstad was eighth and Darlene Muirhead 11th.

Colorado Mountain College's Eric Peterson won the men's giant slalom and former U.S. Team downhiller Sam Collins took second place honors.

BYU skier Joel Davidowski was third to lead the Cougars' first place charge in the giant slalom.

The BYU women placed six skiers in the top 11 to win Saturday's slalom event. BYU's Kurkowiak, from Poland, led the women's team by winning the slalom event by just 0.003 second margin over Western State College's Heather Carisch.

"We saw significant improvement this weekend," said Stevenson. The women won the giant slalom combined by 15 seconds and by nine seconds in the slalom.

"Nine seconds in the slalom on that particular course is a big margin," said Stevenson.

BYU Finnish skier Jouni Kijanen led the Cougars in the slalom placing third just behind first place skier, Brent LaBounty from College of Idaho. WSC's Martin Thenell was second.

Five skiers from each team compete for points with only the top three skiers from each team scoring.

"Our fourth and fifth men fell in the first run of the slalom which put incredible pressure upon the first three men to finish," said Stevenson.

BYU's top three finishers, Kijanen, fourth place Steve Jones, and eighth place Davidowski, had to finish the second run. "If one of our top three would have fallen, BYU may not have qualified for the national championships," he said.

In collegiate nordic skiing action, the BYU men's and women's nordic teams both placed third overall in relay and individual events held at Wasatch State Park in Heber Valley Friday and Saturday.

BYU skier Keith Erickson won the men's individual event and BYU's top woman finisher was Kathy Nielsen placing sixth.

Women's basketball team drops pair of road games

By KIMBERLY WHITING
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU Women's Basketball Team lost a pair of High Country Athletic Conference road games 83-69 to Creighton in Omaha, Neb., and 101-72 to HCAC defending champion New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, N.M.

According to BYU Coach Courtney Leishman, the Creighton gym was really difficult to play in because of its "cracker-box" size. "We really didn't play well and the inside people couldn't get good shots off," Leishman said.

Junior forward Susan Shumway led the Cougars with 26 points and nine rebounds. Shumway is averaging 12.3 points per game this season, up from last year's average of 9.3 points.

There were two other players in double figures against Creighton; sophomore forward Michelle Carter with 12 points and junior guard Tanise Chung-Hoon with 10 points and four assists.

Creighton dominated the entire game and led at half time, 36-32.

Senior forward Cathy Nixon, who averages 17.6 points per game, fouled out after contributing nine points.

In the game against NMSU Saturday, the Cougars shot only 40 percent from the field, while NMSU shot a respectable 56 percent.

Leading scorer for the Cougars was Chung-Hoon with 12 points. Shumway, Nixon, freshman forward Scarlett Overly and freshman guard Danielle Taylor each contributed 10 points.

Overly led in rebounds with seven and junior guard Karina Zapata had eight assists. Zapata leads in assists this season, with 4.7 per game, and also in free throws, shooting 89 percent.

BYU is listed sixth in field goal percentage with 51.2 percent and seventh in scoring offense with 83.9 points.

Those placements are higher than any other HCAC team in any team category.

Cougar John Kohls regains wrestling championship title

By BRADY BINGHAM
Universe Sports Writer

Defending champion John Kohls of BYU returned to the Cougar lineup to retain his crown at the Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association (MIWA) meet in Greeley, Colo. last weekend.

Kohls defeated all four of his competitors in the meet to move his record to 16-1. He was then named as the tournament's outstanding wrestler in defending his MIWA title at 167 pounds.

For Kohls, who is third-ranked nationally by Amateur Wrestling News, it was his first varsity meet since suffering from an emergency appendectomy on New Year's Day.

"We had him wrestle a junior varsity match the previous weekend at Colorado Northwestern," said BYU head coach Alan Albright.

"We moved him up to the 177 pound class for a challenge, but he still won easily with a pin."

Another Cougar grappler who has been improving quickly is 150-pound senior Jeff Tripp.

After winning a close 14-13 decision over the eighth-ranked wrestler from Clemson on Jan. 23, Tripp won the 150-pound MIWA division title.

In the team title, Utah State won with 122 points, followed by Wyoming with 103. BYU finished third in the 13 team field with 80.25 points.

The Cougars will be traveling to California for three matches during the week.

BASKETBALL

Head Coach Ladell Andersen called the team together and warned them about what was about to come.

"He told us to keep it all in perspective," said Usevitch.

"He told us we're the same team now as we were three weeks ago."

"I expect them to be a very solid ball club," said BYU guard Andy Toolson.

"They have good quickness and strength – we'll have to be ready to play."

"They'll really be up to play the No. 2 team in the nation," said Usevitch, "we'll need to be up for this game too."

This winter, lift your spirits.

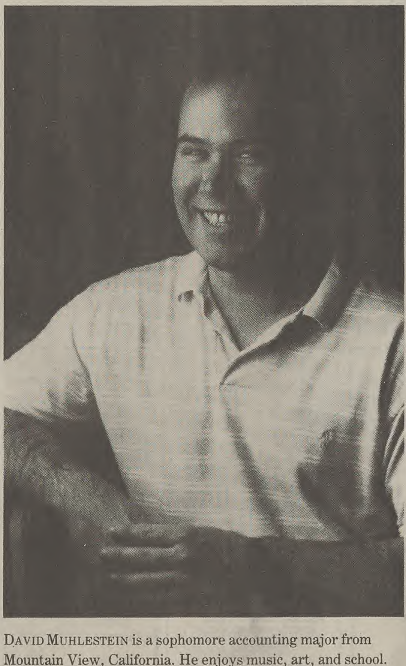
A BYU Resident Speaks Out

On Living On Campus



DAVID MUHLESTEIN is a sophomore accounting major from Mountain View, California. He enjoys music, art, and school.

I wanted to concentrate on my studies. I felt on-campus living would allow me the most study time since I wouldn't have to shop, cook, or clean. I found all this plus extra benefits such as reading/writing tutors, computer labs, and study halls. For me, on-campus living was a very smart move.

Peace returns to Marion

By MICHELLE MELENDEZ
Senior Reporter

MARION — Until two weeks ago, most of the nation had never heard of this small, quiet town, nestled in the heart of Summit County. But the bombing of a nearby stake center, an entourage of law enforcement officials and media, and a long-awaited confrontation by a polygamous family have risen the town to an unwanted fame.

The worst is over — for now at least — and members of the town would just like to see things return to normal. They'll even go out of their way if they have to.

Many residents have suffered. At least four families were moved out of their homes for two weeks. They were bothered and hassled by media trying to get out all the facts. The inside of their church building was mutilated, like meat in a grinder. And they live in fear that the family will be back.

One man lost a lot of business because the road to his snowmobile shop was closed off. Another family brought in extra revenue by charging $5 to those who wanted to park across from the stake center.

Don and Miriam Jepsen are just glad to be back in their house. The Jepsens are next-door neighbors to Addam Swapp and Vicki Singer and Miriam calls the situation "depressing" and "inconvenient."

The Jepsens house was caught in the middle of gunfire last Thursday morning when the siege ended and the Singer-Swapp family was taken into custody.

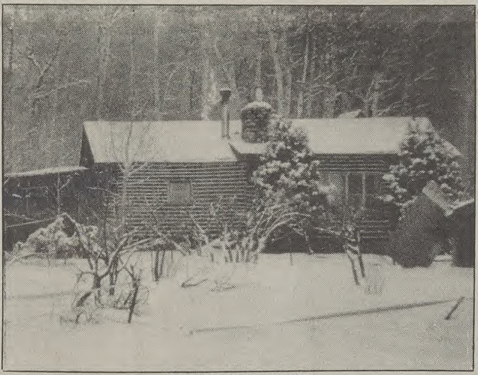
Sam Flinders was up early that morning.

"I could hear all the noise. I got up at 3 a.m. There were shattered windows and a lot of shooting," he said.

Flinders, who lives down the road from the Singer house, said he did not know Swapp personally, but considered him to be more aggressive than John Singer, who was killed nine years ago.

He called Swapp "some kind of crackpot" and said "there's got to be something wrong with someone to bomb a church." Flinders said the Singer family was "strong and loyal within their own realm."

He also criticized those who sympathize with the Singer family. "They don't know what was going on. Let us move them (the Singer family) to their neighborhood to see how they like it."



THE SINGER HOME

He spoke of those who have appeared on talk shows and peace vigils in support of what the family was doing.

But Flinders said he fears that this is not the end. "Knowing what's gone on, somebody will move back, whether it's the same people or some other family. We were hoping it would be the end."

What was exciting at the beginning turned into a situation "difficult for everyone" and now Flinders plans on getting about his way of life, hoping its the end.

Saturday, the case was still under investigation. The Singer compound, set off about a mile from the main highway, is still cluttered with law enforcement officials, a bright yellow police line and a school bus at the entrance of the driveway.

John Hansen guards that entrance. He is part of the search and rescue team for Summit County whose usual assignments include snowmobile and avalanche accidents.

He calls this a "once in a lifetime thing," and said he probably would have been shot if he were standing in that same place on Thursday morning.

Down the road there are children snowmobiling. This is the first chance they have had to come out to the area. Life is going on as usual.

Patsy Lewis, whose house is across the street from the bombed church building, said the situation was "tense and nervous" and "there was more excitement than fear." The Lewis' had people in and out of their house during the ordeal, using the phone and seeking warmth.

"It's a lot quieter today," she said.

Lewis said the Singer family was reclusive, but very pleasant. "This is the last thing you would expect to happen. As long as they were living the way they wanted and it didn't affect us, it was okay. But I couldn't understand why they wanted to blow up a church."

Lewis heard the bomb go off, but thought it was a wind gust against the house. It shook the house and knocked a picture off the wall. "The last thing on your mind is that it's a bomb," she said.

Lewis also echoed the thoughts of others that this situation is not over. "Those people demostrating at the capitol — they didn't have the real story," she said.

Another resident in Kamas said there are still parents keeping their children home from school, after the school was threatened. She said people are still scared and that this situation is not over.

But life will still go on. The cows and horses graze in snow-covered fields, the snow still falls (a lot of it) and residents can try and concentrate on getting their lives back in order.

All the families have been able to move back into their houses, but appear tired and anxious to forget about what has happened.

Students taught to say 'no'

Olson urges moral responsibility

By CHRISTY WARD
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU associate dean of Family, Home and Social Sciences said high school students should be taught to be ethically and morally responsible in a sex education program.

"We think the most important thing is to teach students a frame of understanding in which they can say to themselves about a decision, about a choice, about an option, 'Well, is it right? Is it wise? Why?'," said Terrance Olson Friday at the Eighth Annual Health and Wellness Conference on Adolescent Health and Behavior Problems.

The conference was sponsored by Human Affairs International and the BYU Department of Health Sciences.

After Congress passed the Adolescence Family Act (ridiculed by Gary Trudeau and others as the "Chastity Act") in 1981, Olson formed the AANCHOR program (An Alternative National Curriculum on Responsibility).

In an attempt to slow the increasing number of teen-age pregnancies, Olson said students need to be educated rather than given therapeutic help.

"We have dollar problems to which we are throwing nickel solutions," Olson said.

"If we could put into adolescent minds the fact that life consists of more than the present moment," he said, "then we are laying the foundation of meaning that could pay dividends in presenting problems."

According to Olson, experts have defined three sources which currently contribute to the problem of teen-age pregnancies and sexually transmitted diseases.

Ignorance and incompetence are the first two sources; however, the AANCHOR program chooses to concentrate on the third source — resistance.

"Resistance is the act of human behavior which refuses to see or act in accordance with reality as if you were blind to the truth and your blindness was self-inflicted," said Olson.

Youths that hold this self-deceiving attitude shift responsibility from themselves to other people, according to Olson.

"My experience with adolescents has been that if they see life through the eyes of a helpless victim, we are not likely to be very effective," Olson said.

"Even if we try to give those kinds of students more knowledge, even if we try to teach them to be more competent, unless they give up their resistance, they do not change their behavior," he said.

Because humans are the only species on the earth with a conscience, Olson's program deals with the moral and ethical domain central to the human experience.

The guiding principles of the AANCHOR program rest on the need to address morality and teen-age pregnancy before it becomes a problem.

"We have chosen this method of prevention, because in spite of documented increases in premarital sexual involvement across the country, still, often the majority of students who have not yet graduated from high school are sexually abstinent," Olson said.

Olson feels his program has had some encouraging effects. "We have gotten some significant differences on the way adolescents see their families and on their attitudes toward premarital sexual involvement in the first place. They are more abstinent in attitude toward sex after they have had our curriculum than before," he said.

The AANCHOR program also hopes to instill some long-term attitudes and goals, according to Olson.
